BALTIMORE—THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1827.

The Splendid Drawing yesterday of the GRAND LITERATURE LOTTERY of the State of MARYLAND, which took place agreeably to announcement, and of which the Official List is published on the opposite page, resulted with the usual brilliant success to adventurers at COHEN'S OFFICE, No. 114 Market street; where both the great capitals of 20,000 dollars and 10,000 dollars were sold—the former came out to No. 4261—the latter to No. 10430.—In addition to the above capitals, there were also sold at COHEN'S OFFICE, the whole of the 2,000 dollar prizes—6 of the 1,000's and 9 of the 500's, besides A VERY LARGE NUMBER of the minor denominations. In our next we shall present a NEW SCHEME, in which we shall be glad, as heretofore, to receive the orders of our distant friends. The CASH for the whole of the prizes drawn yesterday, is ready, waiting the convenience of the fortunate holders.

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Directors to the Stockholders of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company.

The Directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company, in conformity with the provisions of their charter, submit to the first general meeting of the stockholders, a statement of the affairs of the company, and of the measures they are pursuing in order to carry into effect the important object for which this corporation has been instituted.

In accepting the trust, with which they have been invested, the board were aware of the deep responsibility that would devolve upon them. They were fully apprised of the high expectations which their constituents had formed of the results of this undertaking, and well acquainted with the general impression that nothing would be required to ensure its success but a judicious application of the means at the disposal of the company. They could not therefore be insensible that they owed it to the public, to their constituents and to themselves in the management of a work involving such varied and extensive operations, and from which such important advantages were anticipated, to proceed with caution and not endanger the object by a premature commencement.

The have accordingly been actively engaged in collecting the necessary information, in order that they might secure a judicious location of the road, and be enabled to decide upon the most efficient, and least expensive, moving power to be employed upon it. Much valuable knowledge upon these points has already been gained, and the board are constantly collecting additional facts, which afford important illustrations of the subject, and greatly strengthen their confidence of success. They now believe, that, however this course of procedure may have retarded the commencement, it will ensure a more early, more economical, and more certain completion of the work.

The directors have also deemed it of primary importance, in the first instance, to secure the services of an Engineer, upon whose talents and skill they might safely rely. It is their desire, not less than their duty, to obtain the best professional aid the country will afford, and they will spare no efforts to engage a superintendent of the highest character.

The government of the United States justly appreciating the importance of this enterprise, have extended to it a most liberal patronage. Several able and efficient members of the Topographical Corps, have been detached to the service of the company. These officers have examined various routes from the city of Baltimore to the valley of the Potomac, and along that ravine as far as Cumberland. They are now engaged in a general reconnaissance of the country between the Potomac and Ohio rivers, and are expected to return in a few weeks, prepared to lay before the board the result of their labours. Should a chief engineer by that time have been engaged, the board entertain the hope, that they will soon after, be ready to commence the actual location and construction of the road.

The directors take great pleasure in acknowledging the general approbation and good will with which this enterprise is regarded throughout our country; and particularly in those sections of the west more immediately interested in its success. They have received communications from almost every district between this city and Ohio, as well as from many parts of that flourishing state, giving assurances of a cordial desire to afford the company every aid and support; and of a general willingness on the part of the landholders, to relinquish the ground necessary for the road free of cost.

In conclusion, the board feel a high satisfaction in stating as the result of all the information and experience they have yet acquired, that their confidence in the practicability of a R. I. Road, remains unabated, and that they believe the most sanguine calculations of its importance and utility, whether the object be regarded with reference to its national and local advantages, or, its profits to the stockholders, will be realized. By order of the Board

P. E. THOMAS, President

Baltimore, 1st October, 1827.

Miscellaneous Items

Cravats.—Sterne, in his Sentimental Journey, remarks that "the French conceive, better than they combine," which is indeed true, but it is not thence to be inferred that they do not combine tolerably well, notwithstanding. The contrary is the fact. Witness Cuvier's theories, Vilelle's politics, Ude's cookery, Monsieur Columbin's cosmetics, and Madame Boquet's fashions. But if the point had been doubtful before, it is settled now; for, a book has been published in Paris entitled: "The art of putting on a cravat in thirty-four different ways, with the author's portrait," which latter, by the way, is no doubt adorned with a neck-cloth in his very best style. Now, if this work does not display a talent at combination, we know nothing of the matter. Queer.—Would not a translation be in request among our own Chevaliers des modes?—Cravat tying has hitherto been one of the most mysterious of all arts: more difficult to learn than the interpretation of the Egyptian hieroglyphics, and harder to execute than to rival the cartoons of Raphael. Its perplexities set genius and slight of hand equally at defiance. Gentlemen who are comme il faut at every thing else, are provokingly puzzled in this important affair. We have known young blades that aspire to lead in matters of taste, and who make themselves almost rank with civet and musk, to throw aside in a pet at least a half a dozen pieces, fresh from the bureau, which they have tortured to suit their fancy, in vain: and to retain a seventh only because they found their beau ideal to be out of the reach of their practical skill. And, badinage apart, what contributes more to a finish of bust and dignity of presence, than a cravat suited to the neck with tact and grace? We repeat that the new author on Cravats is likely to become popular—if not where else, at any rate among all dandies in distress.—N. Y. Statesman.

MONTICELLO.—The Charlottesville (Virginia) Gazette complains of the number and conduct of the visitors at Monticello, the seat of the late Mr. Jefferson. It seems that the portion of his family who remain there, have to pay a heavy tax to rude and impertinent curiosity. They have no disposition to refuse entrance and hospitality to those who approach the place with proper feelings and manners; but the modes and extremities of intrusion to which they are subject would seem to be scarcely endurable.

PEACH TREES.—This is the season to destroy the pest which kills this valuable tree; just above the surface of the earth you will find a gum, which has issued from the wound which the worm has made in its root, and of the eatings and of this gum he has formed a sack, in which he has enclosed himself, about one inch in length and of a dark brown colour; looking much like tobacco thrown away after chewing. This contains an insect just ready to come forth with wings; it is of a beautiful black, and looks much like a wasp, not so long, nor with the small middle of that insect, but having round his body a ring of a bright orange colour—in a few days these insects will be at maturity, and they immediately commence a new work of destruction, by depositing near the root of the tree their nits, or young, which in time are quickened and commence eating again. It is supposed that a covering which will prevent their access to the root of the tree, they will preserve it from damage.

POISONED CHEESE.—About thirty members of one of the militia on the parade, at Boston, on Tuesday, were made sick, by eating of cheese, which formed a part of their noon luncheon. We understand that it was a handsome and well flavoured cheese, with no appearance of an improper ingredient, and that about twenty persons who ate of it, sustained no injury. Those who were less fortunate, are recovering from their illness.

Gambling in London.—We find in the London papers appalling accounts of the number, extent, and rapid multiplication of gambling houses in London, and the king's ministers are loudly called upon either to enforce the existing laws, or, if they are inadequate to the suppression of the evil, to enact new ones. The proprietor of the Pandemonium in James street is now raising a grand edifice, the estimated expense of which is 72,000l; and it is stated that, to the disgrace of twelve hundred individuals comprising some of the first names among the nobility and gentry, so many have been found to subscribe each a sum of 60l. towards erecting such a structure.

Queer Accident.—The Stonington Telegraph contains an account of a novel and singular occurrence. Those who know any thing of the nature and habits of sheep, are aware of the singular tenacity with which they follow each other. Wherever one sheep goes, the rest are sure to follow. The other day one of them took it into his head to jump into a corn field; the others, sheep-like, followed, and they were all found up to their backs in mischief. On starting them from the field, they chose to jump over a wall, on the side of which was a deep well. The first one leaped the wall, and brought up at the bottom of the well; and the remainder of the flock followed of course, till eighteen of them were snugly stowed away in the bottom of the well. With much difficulty, they were taken out; though not till eight of them were drowned.—N. Y. Statesman.
